S’WELL NAMED OFFICIAL REUSABLE BOTTLE OF LONDON FASHION WEEK
THE GLOBAL SUSTAINABLE BRAND AND THE BRITISH FASHION COUNCIL
TEAM UP TO REDUCE SINGLE-USE PLASTIC IN 2020

LONDON, 2 January 2020 – S’well, known for creating the original fashion hydration accessory, and the British Fashion Council (BFC), are announcing today a year-long partnership that will reduce single-use plastic at London Fashion Week Men’s and London Fashion Week in 2020.

The partnership kicks off at London Fashion Week Men’s at The Truman Brewery on 4th, 5th and 6th January 2020 with attendees receiving S’well bottles to stay invigorated and hydrated via complimentary water stations throughout the show hub while they enjoy the best fashion has to offer. Similar activations will also take place in February across London Fashion Week events.

“I started S'well almost ten years ago with a goal to bring to the world a water bottle that mixed fashion, functionality and philanthropy,” said Sarah Kauss, founder & CEO, S’well. “We couldn’t be prouder to partner with the British Fashion Council – which has been a leader in eco-friendly fashion initiatives for many years - to help them reduce single-use plastic consumption at London Fashion Week 2020.”

Caroline Rush, BFC Chief Executive, commented: “We are delighted to announce S'well as our official reusable bottle partner for London Fashion Week Men’s and London Fashion Week. By displacing single-use plastic bottles at our venues and shows, we’re making it easier for attendees to embrace positive fashion choices and help reduce the environmental impact of London Fashion Week.”
